

Become a Certified Dyslexia Practitioner – Level 1

If you...

- want to learn how to help struggling readers succeed
- know someone who has been impacted by dyslexia
 - are curious about the science of reading
 - have a bachelor's degree

...then this training is for you!

Each year, the Children's Dyslexia Center of Springfield offers practitioner certification in Multisensory Structured Language Education, also referred to as Orton-Gillingham. In this training, which results in certification through IMSLEC as a Level 1 Dyslexia Practitioner, you gain in-depth knowledge about how students learn to read and how to help them when they struggle. Tuition for this training is FREE; participants only pay for their textbooks and training materials (generally around $250). Additionally, trainees have the option of earning 8 graduate credits at $150 per credit hour through the University of St. Francis. Trainees are eligible to apply for a paid tutor position at the Center upon certification.

"As a trainee, I have found it to be, hands down, the best educational experience of my adult life. Instruction along with support, observation and critique is everything you could ask for. I am almost half-way through the year and it is wonderful to witness so much student growth."
